

GROW & EMPOWER COMMUNITY WITH SMALL GROUP SOFTWARE

Empowering lay leaders

Churches often rely on volunteers to manage and report on the groups in their care. Some churches have hundreds, or even thousands, of groups to monitor and track, which can make the administrative burden seem insurmountable without the proper tools.

FellowshipOne can handle everything from a few home groups to thousands of groups focused on different subject areas. Leaders can manage and report on the activities of their small groups. They can quickly and easily take attendance, respond to contact requests, update individual information, communicate with the group, and more, all without burdening the church staff with additional administrative responsibilities.

Helping people find the right group

Getting individuals connected into a small group is a proven way to help build community among believers and foster their spiritual growth. Using FellowshipOne's group features, new guests and members can search for a group online through your existing website and submit an interest form for one or more groups. An email notification is sent immediately to the selected group leaders. They can then respond with information about the small group and even add that person to their small group.

Monitoring the health of groups

Your church staff will want to monitor the health and effectiveness of small groups. With so many groups to manage, it can be difficult to get a clear picture of each group's status. With FellowshipOne, the lay leaders can easily report on the latest information, attendance and more about their group for staff members to review—without having to email information to staff. This eases the administrative time required to provide oversight on each small group.
